The Fiftieth Anniversary Edition for Nuclear War maintained all of the cards from the fourth edition of the game. It was a Kickstarter-supported release that also set up for the second printing (not the second edition) of Weapons of Mass Destruction. It had a revamped population deck, similar to the WMD release, except with a blue and black back side, rather than grey and black. A single new Secret card was included in this set, one of my favorites, Anti-Vaxers. This is the only set to contain that particular card. Additionally, it included 3 Combination cards.

This edition also came with 8 heavy-gauge cardstock play mats and a spinner board of the same material. It included 55 population cards, some with new artwork. Only the 25,000,000 Population card retained the non-Flying Buffalo Inc. licensed characters from Kenzer & Company. Interestingly, 1 of the characters displayed prominently on the front of the box only appears on the new 1,000,000 Population card.
